Q: Is there any problem in getting September 2020 professional certificate for passport at embassy? I am studying in Europe (Poland, Germany, Luxembourg, France) and need a passport. I am applying for it in this month end. Is there any problem in getting this professional certificate? Or is it mean that I should wait a few weeks and then process the normal document?
A: This is not something that is done in one visit. The questions in the passport application are answered by a consulate, which in turn, will advise you about your first step. You can apply for a passport appointment and all go at the same time. Or you can wait and hope your documents arrive on time.

Ford wants more fuel economy from its trucks, SUVs and crossovers - Dec 9, 2009 Ford (NYSE: F) is making some big and bold moves in the pickup and SUV game. Both the F-150 and the Expedition are getting close to 40 MPG. And, the all new Ford F-150 is the most fuel-efficient full-size pickup ever made. The F-150 may only have a 7 MPG fuel efficiency advantage over the competition, but that is miles and miles better than it was even just one year ago. It's all about the fuel economy. It makes perfect sense, since the Ford F-150 is such a ridiculously fuel-efficient truck. According to a 2004 study done by the EPA, the Ford F-150 is as fuel efficient as an almost new Toyota Tundra. (The Ford F-150 was not rated by the EPA, but it did win the 2004 Truck of the Year in Consumer Reports magazine.) But that's not why I bring up the fuel economy. We've been hearing about fuel economy for years. And, it's a big reason why we're finally seeing significant changes in the truck and SUV markets. In the past, cars like the Ford Mustang, Chrysler 300M, Toyota Camry, Honda Accord and others not only had similar fuel economy numbers, but consumers just didn't care. They drove them and loved them. However, today's drivers are focused on fuel economy. That's why we see such changes in the market. And, that's why trucks and SUVs are getting smaller and more fuel efficient. And, it

Bundler seems to be completely quiet in the Github page and on rubygems.org, so I can not find any up-to-date resource about it: I always need to go to a gem's Github page to get a "current" version of the gem. For example: Why don't they update it to the latest version on rubygems.org? Why do I need to go to the github version? A: why don't they update it to the latest version on rubygems.org? I think it is because Rubygems is self-hosted, and they don't have to worry about users getting the latest gem versions on gem server. All that is done on a temporary server. Why do I need to go to the github version? Probably because GitHub gem repository can have more recent gem version than rubygems.org. Some gems have a separate gem repository. Bundler itself is also self-hosted, and has a separate gem repository. Using binstubs instead of bundler, I was able to update gems on my local machine even from bundled gems.
