For content creators, editing photographs on a Windows computer is a nightmare. Photoshop doesn't support a full wide-screen display on Windows 10 and doesn't have a frame and scale tool, so the images look different when edited. There's no grid in Photoshop Elements. Fortunately, Elements can edit your Windows image files. It's much better than using Windows Paint to edit your images. Here are 23 reasons why Photoshop Elements is better than Photoshop. Elements is a better alternative to Photoshop 1. It supports a wider variety of file formats than Photoshop Elements can edit files in TIFF, JPEG, BMP, PNG, GIF, PDF and PSD formats. Photoshop can only edit PSD files. You can import images into Elements from various other file formats and edit them the same way you'd do so in Photoshop. 2. Photoshop Elements can open a wide variety of file formats

The file formats that Photoshop Elements support are no longer listed, but it can open files from a variety of file formats, including: PSD, TIFF, JPEG, GIF, PNG, BMP and PDF. 3. Elements can edit transparency Elements can add transparency into images, blend images together, and even apply filters to images that aren't actually in the file. 4. Photoshop Elements creates smaller files when saving When you save an image in Photoshop Elements, it saves the image in an uncompressed file format. When you save an image in Photoshop, it saves the image in a JPEG or Photoshop file format, which compresses the image and creates a larger file than would be saved in an uncompressed format. Photoshop saves a default file size, but you can change it by clicking the file size option in the Save as dialog box. 5. Photoshop Elements can edit RAW files Although Photoshop doesn't officially support RAW files, it can open a RAW file in Photoshop Elements, and you can edit and save the image. 6.

Elements' touch screen design is much simpler Although Photoshop is designed for editing images on a full-sized display, Elements has a touch screen design. It's much easier to use and intuitive to use than Photoshop. 7. Elements is more efficient Elements is about 3 times faster to use than Photoshop. Each activity in Elements is simpler and faster. Elements provides many a lot of these problems today are because things change too quickly and no one knows what to do next. There are a lot of school systems out there that are on the cusp of being evaluated or already evaluated. The only thing that I would like to see happen is that some of the evaluations of the school systems be standardized so that we can compare apples to apples. And having that happen, and having more funding for the system, and having more money for educators... Reporter: But some of the spending data shows that school finance has become more flatlined in recent years and that teachers' salaries and class sizes have been increasing. Rudolph: Right. We're spending more but we're not seeing the results of the spending. Reporter: Mr. Rudolph, will you see the grand jury recommendations as you said? Rudolph: Yes. We'll see it when the grand jury releases it. Reporter: Thank you. Rudolph: Thank you for this. Comparative study of the microstructure of aragonite and calcite crystals by x-ray diffraction spectroscopy and hyperspectral imaging. Micro-structural and compositional analysis of aragonite and calcite crystals was performed using X-ray diffraction (XRD) and hyperspectral imaging (HSI) techniques. The objective was to assess if different microstructural features in the two minerals could be related to their differential morphology and, in particular, to the extent of crystal twinning. The microcrystals of aragonite were characterized by quasi-square shapes and the presence of rosettes, whereas calcite crystals were rod-shaped. HSI spectra of aragonite and calcite showed two main peaks at about 3.15 and 3.40 keV, but the HSI data also revealed that calcite and aragonite differ in the extension of their mosaic structure. Quantitative electron back-scattered diffraction (EBSD) mapping allowed to evaluate that the twinning ratio in calcite was of about 45% and that it was significantly lower in aragonite. The thermodynamic analysis of the water content did not show significant differences between aragonite and calcite crystals of similar morphology. Our data show that the presence of rosettes in aragonite is directly related to its twinning, whereas the main difference in the crystal morphology is due to different levels of crystal-to-crystal orientation and twinning
