I know there are tons of answers about this issue, but I can't seem to get it to work. Here is what I'm trying to do: I have a div that has a nested div that I want to hide when the parent div is clicked. I have tried several different things, but nothing is working. I know I'm not the only one that has faced this issue, but I can't seem to find any answers to a solution to this problem. I have tried adding the display:none attribute on the inner div, I have tried using opacity, visibility. Nothing is working. My external wrapper div is changing color from black to white, however the inner div is not toggling. I'm sure it is some simple problem that I'm overlooking, but I can't seem to spot it. Thanks! A: You have a typo in your jQuery code. Change 'label' to 'label_size': $('#label_size').toggle('slow', function() { $(this).next().toggle('slow'); }); Updated FIDDLE Aortic valve replacement for elderly. The key phrase "overhaul" was used to describe this new change. Tom Benson has shown a keen interest in getting better, but not a lot of authority. This new ownership change has major ramifications for the future of the Saints. "Easier Said than Done" is how Mr. Benson said it is going to be for the new ownership. The mantra of the new ownership will be "win now, or die trying." I believe this is a bit unrealistic, but a great phrase to live by. Don't get me wrong, I believe
